Profile

Bria joined the IBJI Rehab team in April 2018. Bria is passionate about providing a helping hand to patients recovering from diagnoses with orthopedic and post-surgical intervention needs, with a special interest in the hip joint and sports medicine injuries. She also performs dry needling treatment, blood flow restriction therapy, and Active Release Technique. She finds the best treatment to be ones that get the patient actively involved in their rehabilitation process, taking a proactive and patient-centered approach to all therapy sessions. Bria firmly believes in the importance of teamwork and looks forward to working along side Doctors, Physical Therapists and PTAs within the rehab team to help patients to reach their personal and functional goals in a welcoming, positive and supportive rehab environment.

Bria is also an athletic trainer and received her undergraduate degree in Athletic Training from Illinois State University. Bria has worked with various levels of athletes from high school to professional. She is currently the team PT for the Chicago Red Stars. She has also worked with Northwestern University Football and the Chicago Sky. Due to her first hand knowledge and experiences in working with athletes and patients, Bria is highly motivated to increase awareness toward preventative medicine, physical health, fitness and wellness programs within the community.

Outside of the clinic, Bria enjoys spending time with her three children, Gabby, Nolan and Gavin, as well as running races with her husband, Chris.
